GENEVA, Switzerland—(AP)—French delegates announced Friday an agreement had been reached to appoint a subcommittee of the League of Nations council to deal with the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

The subcommittee will comprise: France, Great Britain, Spain, Turkey, and Poland.

Apparently the agreement indicated withdrawal of the Italians from their reported position that Italy should be included in the body.

The council approved the project of the subcommittee in a private session.

Star Linotyper Is Attacked and Hurt

Police Investigating Attack on Charles Westerman by George Waddle

Charles Westerman, one of The Star's linotype operators, was in bed under a doctor's care at his home on West Sixth street Friday following an attack by George Waddle at 5 p. m. Thursday at Harper's drink stand on South Walnut street.

Westerman, with an armful of groceries, stopped at Harper's for a match to light his cigar when, witnesses said, Waddle called him aside, cursed him and struck at him.

In the following fight it appeared at first that Westerman had an advantage, but later in the night it was discovered he had sustained a mouth wound which continued to bleed, and he was under a doctor's care Friday.

Westerman said Waddle was angry over some police court news publication of several weeks ago. Westerman explained he had nothing to do with the management of the newspaper, but he said Waddle then cursed him personally and struck at him.

The Star dealt action in the matter Friday pending Westerman's return to work—but city police meanwhile began an investigation.

GOVERNOR IS ISSUE

Lafoon Administration Backing Rhea, Friend of Slain Attorney

FRANKFORT, KY.—(AP)—On the eve of Kentucky's Democratic gubernatorial primary election, Governor Ruby Lafoon ordered National Guard troops Friday to proceed to Harlan county immediately.

The reason given was that lives, constitutional rights, and the property of citizens may be safeguarded and protected. The election is to be held Saturday.

Attorney Slain

HARLAN KY.—(AP)—The dynamite bomb assassination of County Attorney Elmon Middleton was said by four Harlan county officials Thursday night to be in reprisal for his crusade against slot machine operations in this county community.

His relative, Sheriff Theodore R. Middleton, with whom he had political differences, said that four men arrested Thursday on charges of willful murder in the slaying were involved in slot machine operations. The prisoners, listed as Bob Farmer, Otis Noe, Fred Howard and Bill Leonard, were taken to jails in other counties.

The 30-year-old prosecutor was blasted to death in front of his home here Wednesday after he had testified before the grand jury. Officials said, against slot machine operators. The explosion occurred when the official stepped on the starter of his car.

Joint Statement

Sheriff Middleton, Circuit Judge J. M. Gilbert, Commonwealth's Attorney Daniel Boone Smith and County Judge Morris Taylor issued a joint statement deploring the assassination had political significance.

Headquarters of Thomas S. Rhea, candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the run-off primary against A. B. (Chappy) Chandler, September 7, Wednesday referred to the county attorney as the "only friend" Rhea had in Harlan's official family.

Gov. Ruby Lafoon, a supporter of Rhea, in posting a $1,000 reward Thursday, denounced the slaying.

But it's known that a lot of folks had to dig up margin money in a hurry when the market broke 82 points the morning after it was learned the loan rate was to be 8 cents instead of 12.

Whether or not any senators were in that position, some friends of senators certainly were long on cotton, having believed senatorial assurances that the loan rate would stay at 12.

Many cotton mill men had been lobbying for the 12-cent loan—which meant a priced price—and either had unhedged stocks and inventories or were long on futures.

Southern senators and lobbyists sold out of the "blow to the farmer" and dire political consequences and held up congress until the

Pestilence Threat Feared in Florida

Red Cross Estimates Hurricane Death Toll at 256—Relief Begun

Copyright Associated Press. MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—Possibility of pestilence—the usual aftermath of wholesale death—confronted authorities Friday as the task of finding more bodies in Florida's hurricane-ravaged keys, went laboriously and painfully forward.

Gas-masked armies of men penetrated the lower keys, which were made a shambles by Monday's hurricane.

The Red Cross estimated the death toll at 256.

Funeral pyres may burn in the desolate spots where veterans were struck down in FERA camps, if the board of health finds this procedure necessary.

Investigations were being pressed into the tragedy as Washington allocated $200,000 for the relief of victims.

Weather Reports Hit. WASHINGTON—(AP)—Failure to move 675 veterans out of the path of the Florida hurricane aroused an official debate Thursday.

Harry L. Hopkins, chief of the FERA in whose camps the veterans were quartered, blamed the Weather Bureau for their not being moved.

Weather Bureau officials said their forecasts charted a fairly clear course which the storm followed.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson said the Weather Bureau forecasts were so excellent they allowed the Red Cross to prepare in advance for relief work.

The American Legion (Eliot) launched out on what it described as its own "complete, unbiased and impartial investigation" with particular reference to conditions in the veterans' camps and CCC camps in that (the Florida keys) storm area where veterans were kept prior to and through the disaster.

National Commander Frank N. Belgrader, named Howard P. McFarland, Tampa, Fla., next department commander of Florida, to make the investigation.

"I think," Hopkins said at a press conference, "it was a terrible and a shocking disaster. But I don't think we're reading those weather reports which I've been reading that anybody would necessarily have evacuated those people."

Declaring he had discussed the hurricane situation with President Roosevelt by telephone, Hopkins said that he had authorized Governor Shubert of Florida to spend "any funds for things at the present time."

Negro Suspect Held in Burning of Barn

Dorsey Beal Arrested for S. H. Turner Fire Below Patmos, in LaFayette

Dorsey Beal, local negro, was arrested here Friday by Deputy Sheriff Reginald Bearden on suspicion of burning the barn of Mrs. S. H. Turner, 3½ miles south of Patmos in LaFayette county, last Sunday night.

Beal was taken into custody and held for Sheriff R. H. Duty of LaFayette county, following an investigation conducted by Deputy Bearden and Earle Turner, son of Mrs. Turner.

The Turner barn was one of the largest in this section, 48 by 70 feet, and when it burned 400 bales of hay, 4 tons of loose hay and a large quantity of fodder, corn and plow tools were also destroyed. An adjoining wagon-shed caught fire and was also lost.

Dale Turner, another son, who acted as farm manager for his mother, sustained severe burns on the hands while trying to retrieve implements from the blazing building.

Erle Turner, former city editor of The Star and now employed by a Texarkana printing firm, told The Star that the Beal negro owed the Turners $100 on a farm account, left the place following a dispute about applying half his hay-wages on the debt, and uttered the threat "I'll be back." The barn burned shortly afterwards.

YOUR HEALTH

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

One of the most important steps in ordinary life insurance examination is determining whether sugar is to be found in the urine, as the number of deaths from diabetes is greatest in the class of people who take out the largest life insurance policies. Moreover, diabetes is one of the diseases which is definitely increasing as a cause of death.

In the United States it is one of the leading causes, accounting for about 22 deaths for every 100,000 of the population as compared with 14.5 deaths in England and 12.8 deaths in Canada for each 100,000 of the population.

In childhood and in the younger adult ages there has been a distinct improvement in the death rates from diabetes, and the major portion of the increase affects women in the advanced years of life.

Sir Walter Langdon-Brown, eminent British physician, believes that this increase in older women is due to the fact that they are drinking alcohol much more freely than they used to.

One of the difficulties which confronts life insurance examiners is the fact that sugar may appear in the urine in some cases without presence of the condition called diabetes. Many conditions may be associated with presence of small amounts of sugar in the excretions and still not with diabetes. Sometimes overaction of the thyroid gland will lead to transient appearances of sugar.

There are cases, of course, in which the difficulty is in the kidney, which organ permitting the sugar to pass when there is an excess amount of sugar in the diet.

Insurance companies cannot afford to grant policies to those who have diabetes without, of course, taking this fact into account. The diabetic person is more likely to become infected than is the one who is not diabetic.

Diabetics also show a special liability to the onset of hardening of the arteries at an early age. Therefore, the life insurance examiner when he finds sugar present in the urine is likely to want to make repeated studies of the excretions to find out whether the sugar appears regularly, and also the extent to which it appears.

If the person is found to be passing sugar regularly and diastolic acid as well, the examiner is certain to say that he is unacceptable as a risk for life insurance.

Unrestrained human greed in action is seldom an entirely pleasant sight; and the glamorous old gold rush days of the far west, when you stop to think about it, do show greediness in all its crudest and ugliest forms.

It is the fact that the author seems to be fully aware of this that makes C. B. Glasscock's new book, "The War of the Copper Kings," a valuable social document.

Mr. Glasscock here relates the gaudy history of Butte, Mont., the exploitation of the "richest hill on earth," the unending squabbling of men for riches and the fine, free-for-all piracy that resulted when the Standard Oil crowd finally moved in on the scene.

The locality had a long history of freebooting. It began before Butte itself was built, when one six-month period saw some 30 murders and an almost equal number of vigilante-inspired lynchings; it continued down through the earth-shaking fight of the copper kings, Clark and Daly, and reached its climax when a bright young man named F. Augustus Heinze fought the Standard Oil group to a standstill.

There is nothing very edifying about all this. These fights corrupted Montana's politics, disturbed her industry and accomplished nothing—except the personal enrichment of a few accomplished grabbers. But they do make a gaudy, exciting, almost unbelievable story.

Published by Bobbs-Merrill, "The War of the Copper Kings," sells for $3.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Dad, can I have the car?" Mother spoke up then and said, "No, we're going out."

"Well, I've just got to have it. I've asked Rene to go to the dance. You can't get to the club any other way."

"Where are we going?" asked Dad. "He would. His wife gave him a sharp glance."

"You could take a street car to the Taylor's," said Bob.

"We could but we won't," replied his mother.

Dad to the Defense "He's in a jam, Mary," protested Dad. "We have to help the kid out."

If Rene's been asked to the dance, she's been asked. He'll have to take the car."

"Now you two listen," bristled mother. "Bob's only 17. He has the car nearly all day, except when he grudgingly drives me to market. The other day I asked him to take me to Mrs. Bell's bridge and then call and get me. But it interested with a tennis match of his and he neglected as though I were a superfluous nuisance. He came an hour late. There I sat."

"We're always thinking of your feelings, Bob, but it never occurs to you to think of ours. You take too much for granted. Why didn't you ask me if we would need the car tonight before you asked Rene? Anyway she's too young and you're too young to be traipsing around all night to the dances."

All for Bob's Sake "We're going, in a crowd. Angel and Marty are going with us and maybe Marty's cousin."

"See here, Mary," said Dad. "When we joined the club we both said it was Bob's sake. All his friends go, and he has no way to get there unless he drives. You want him to have a good time."

"Yes, and I want the car sometimes too. I did all my own work for years to save for it. You bought it for me—for us, I mean. I don't see why I should let Bob use it all day and all night. Besides he'll get killed. He comes in, too late."

"Aw, Mom, you can't break up a party."

"You don't need to drive 30 miles after a party to cool off."

"Well, you're in bed and you don't need it then."

"I need the extra money it takes for gas. Anyway we never had a car at your age."

"There weren't any clubs then," Dad reminded her.

One Solution "All right, then," Mother defeated, rose from the table. "I'll give you the car, Bob. The vote is two to one. But you earn the money for gas and upkeep. I'll buy myself a bicycle."

Suddenly Bob had an idea. "Say, that's great. If you get me a bike I can go places. All except some dances. I don't want the car, honestly, Mother. I guess I have been pretty selfish. But you'd better learn to drive."

Which was one way of solving the problem. But Mother was right. Youth is appropriating too many family cars and I for one consider it unfair and dangerous.

"For daytime, wear a very small amount of rouge, no eye-shadow, a bit of mascara—only if your lashes are practically colorless. Powder that matches your skin and plenty of lipstick," says Mel Berns, one of Hollywood's outstanding makeup artists.

"It amuses you to work out a strange rouge-and-powder color combination, go ahead and have fun. But if you want to look your best, wipe it off before you leave your house and put on a conventional makeup that enhances but doesn't change your natural beauty."

You should attempt no tricky makeup. Your rouge ought to be put on according to the shape of your face, of course. But this doesn't mean that you should make it on heavily. It is intended only to give your cheeks a healthy glow—not a painted look."

Our days are ships that put to sea while in the dusk we silent stand and watch them sailing far to sea. To some unknown, far-distant land. Into the dim and starless night. Over an ocean gray and lone. Onward they sail, nor left nor right. Each with a cargo of its own. We may not know till all is past. What port they make when ever seen. But this I know—that I at last shall find my ships awaiting me. Then may we stand and smile at last. If we have sent in every one. A little love, a little faith. A little deed of kindness done. —Selected.

Luck in Bucketfuls Is Showered On Harold Lloyd in Latest Role

HOLLYWOOD—Harold Lloyd's just about the luckiest guy in Hollywood. A terrific heat spell sets in—and he draws scenes in his new picture that call for him to be doused with water all day long. How do you like that?

This particular sequence in the picture shows Lloyd, who thinks he's a great fighter, doing some intensive training. One day the film scene of him doing road work and running straight into a creek. The next day he's continuing his road work.

But, because he's supposed to have just come out of the creek, he must be dripping wet. Hence the dousing. And just to help matters along, his garb consists of boxing gloves and a pair of oversized trunks held up by worn-out suspenders.

The scenes are being shot on location about 15 miles from here. Director Leo McCarey, the camera and sound crews and apparatus, four large reflectors and three laborers are all loaded into the camera truck ready to follow right along with Lloyd as he jogs down the dirt road.

"Come on, fellows, let's get going. We have a lot to do today," McCarey shouts.

"Wait until I get doused," Lloyd replies. He walks over to the sidelines, where two men have buckets of water and sponges, with which they really give him a good soaking. Then he takes his place in front of the camera.

"Here we go," says McCarey. "Harold, as soon as the car starts, you begin running. We'll set the pace. All you have to do is keep up with us. All right, Camera!"

The truck starts down the road, Lloyd following about 15 feet behind. They go about 100 feet when McCarey yells, "Cut."

"That's swell," he says. "Now we'll do the scene where you run off the road and flop under a tree."

"Let's try this scene over again first," Harold requests. "I think it should be funnier if I acted like I was shadow boxing as I ran."

McCarey, ever him suspiciously, a hunch telling him that Harold merely wants to be soaked with water again while McCarey sits on the truck in the hot sun.

We see Carol Lombard as Charming Manicurist. Back in Hollywood you can watch some activity on an aircooled stage. Here we are on the "Hands Across the Table" set, supposedly a barber shop in New York. It's quite an elaborate shop, too, having 12 chairs, four manicuring tables, and all the latest barber gadgets.

Carol Lombard, attired in the white costume of a manicurist, is sitting in a barber chair at one end of the shop studying some new dialog while Cameraman Ted Tetzlaff directs the placing of lights at the other end of the set for a medium shot of her giving Fred MacMurray a manicure.

"What are you doing, studying a correspondence course in manicuring?" Fred yells at her.

The actress doesn't even take her eyes off the script as she replies, "What's it to you? You wouldn't know whether I did a good job or not, anyway."

Ever since the picture started these two have been trying to outdo each other. So far Carol has the edge. And she should. What a wit and what a vocabulary!

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Lydia and Priscilla

Text: Acts 16:11-15; 18:1-3, 24-28 The International Union Sunday School Lesson for September 8.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

The place and power of women in the early Christian church stand out plainly from the records of the New Testament. The fact is all the more remarkable when one realizes that the church was not free from the general attitude toward women that was prevalent in surrounding society.

Paul, who has an authoritative record of his words, was not particularly progressive at this point. Speaking in meeting and performing other functions in the church were things that pertained to men only, and Paul would seem to have gone out of his way about this business of "keeping women in their place."

Nevertheless, Paul was not a despiser or a disparager of women. He recognized their force of character, and he welcomed their cooperation in his early work.

The New Deal

White House granted a "compromise." But the AAA, knowing that very few farmers held any cotton at this time and having promised to subsidize growers up to a guaranteed return of 12 cents a pound, couldn't see how the farmer would be hurt.

The "compromise," providing a 10-cent loan and a more equitable subsidy method as between growers, is still expected to achieve the AAA objective of a free cotton market and the unloading of some 1,500,000 more bales of surplus cotton on the world market.

Objective of a free cotton market and the unloading of some 1,500,000 more bales of surplus cotton on the world market could have been done under the 12-cent loan policy.

Strangely enough, it left the speculators still in the bag.

Pestilence Threat

He thinks ought to be done." He had received no explanation of delay in dispatching the veterans' rescue train, Hopkins said, adding: "From the Weather Bureau reports this storm was hopping all around there and nobody could have known where it was going to hit."

"Wherever we had a camp, at Key West or anywhere else, had the storm hit, it would have been wrecked."

He said the veterans, who were engaged in building an overseas highway, were under the direction of the Florida Highway Commission, and that "technically" they were the responsibility of the Florida Relief Administration.

Once there was a president who said something about "open covenants, openly arrived at." But nobody ever took him up on it.

A comely colored girl had just been baptized in the river. As she came to the surface she cried, "Bless de Lawd, I see saved! Las' night Ah was in de ahms of Satan, but tonight Ah'm in de ahms of de Lawd!"

"Sistuh," came a baritone voice from the shore, "how is you all fixed up for tomorrow evening?"

Bristol lies on the border of Tennessee and Virginia. State street is the dividing line of the states. Virginia is wet, Tennessee dry; tax rates are higher in one state than in the other; traffic regulations and Sunday laws are different; and all tend to make it a complicated city.

ITALY Masses Modern Mechanized Forces for Coming Strife

VS.

Illy-equipped, Dauntless Warriors Ready to Defend ETHIOPIA

Ethiopia's forces have proved their courage on the attack—at Adowa, for instance. Now they learn to attack in the modern manner, taking advantage of the cover offered by the countryside. Here cadets stage an advance at Gueneth.

In widely dispersed waves, after the manner found most practical in the World War, Italian troops, moving at double quick, charge upon their objective in an attack during maneuvers along the Austro-Italian frontier.

Italian Troops Show Proficiency With Liquid Fire

Armed with liquid fire, one of the most terrifying of modern weapons, these well trained, young Italian soldiers demonstrate how they will pour flames on Ethiopian forces if called on to do so.

Too Old to Fight? Not in Ethiopia

While Mussolini girds the pick of Italian youth for battle, young and old men rally to Ethiopia's defense. Note the graybeard (second from right) and lack of uniforms.

Rome's Legions Ready to Fight in Face of Gas

For both offense and defense, the Italian troops go to Africa well prepared. Mussolini's infantrymen wore their gas masks as they took part the other day in realistic war games in the foothills of the Alps.

Off to Front—Ethiopian Style

Often without equipment, usually barefoot, Ethiopia's recruits plod afoot toward their country's frontiers in a desperate effort to halt invasion by Italy. This column is led by an officer on mule back.

Guiding Roman Legions

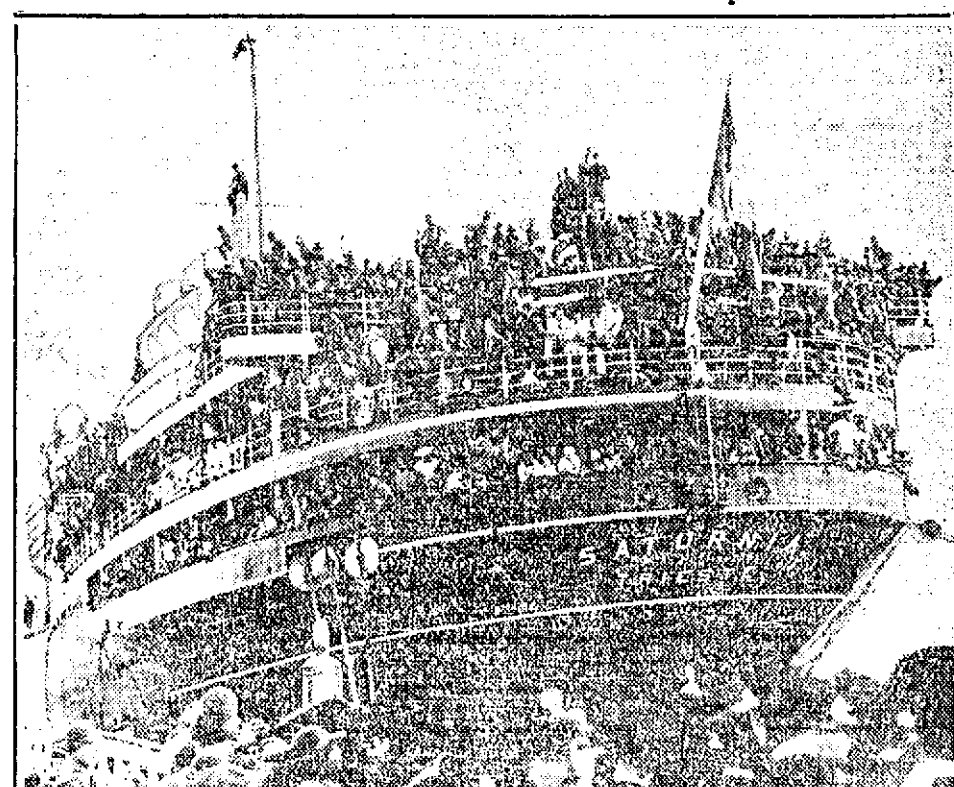

Trained in modern warfare, General Balistochi, Under-Secretary for War, photographed during recent war maneuvers, typifies the leadership of Italian forces.

Chief of Ethiopian Warriors

Carrying a lance like his ancestors, Degdaten Habte Mikael (above), chief of Ethiopia's volunteers enroute to the "front", symbolizes the primitive courage of Italy's foes.

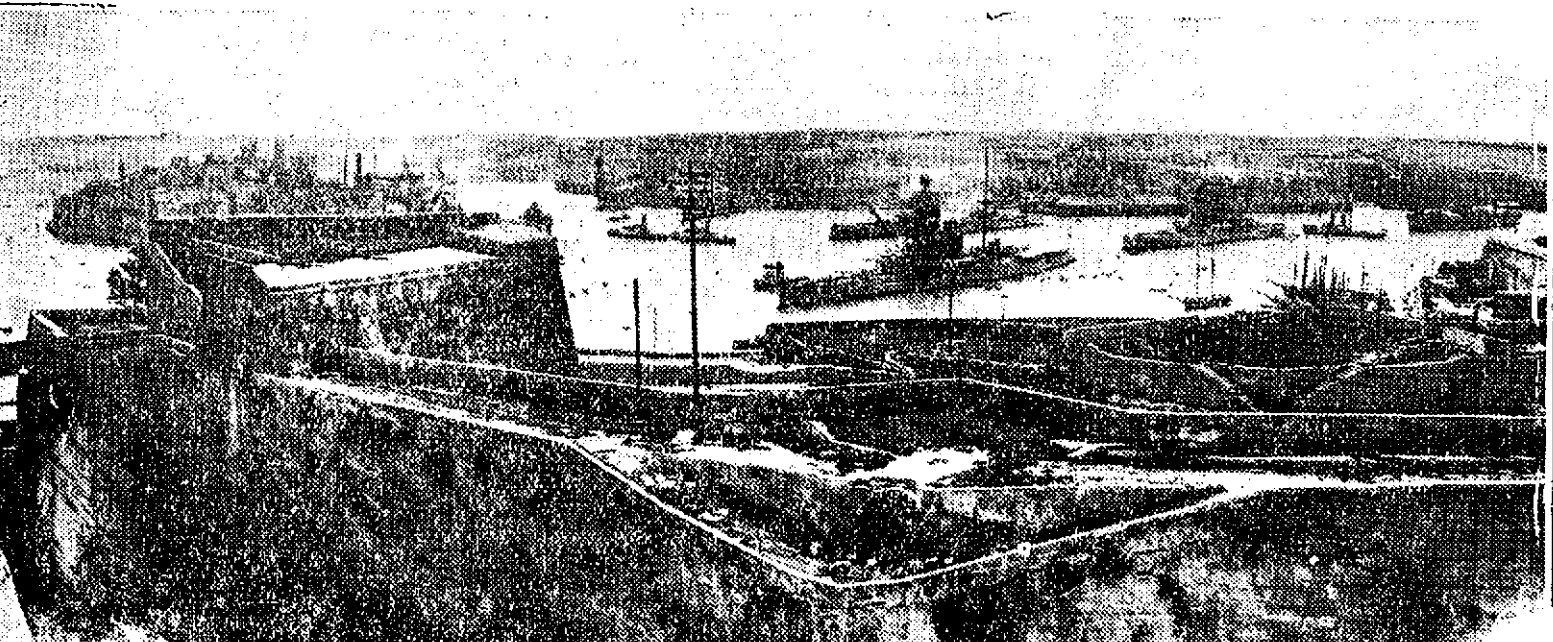

Off to Front—Italian Style

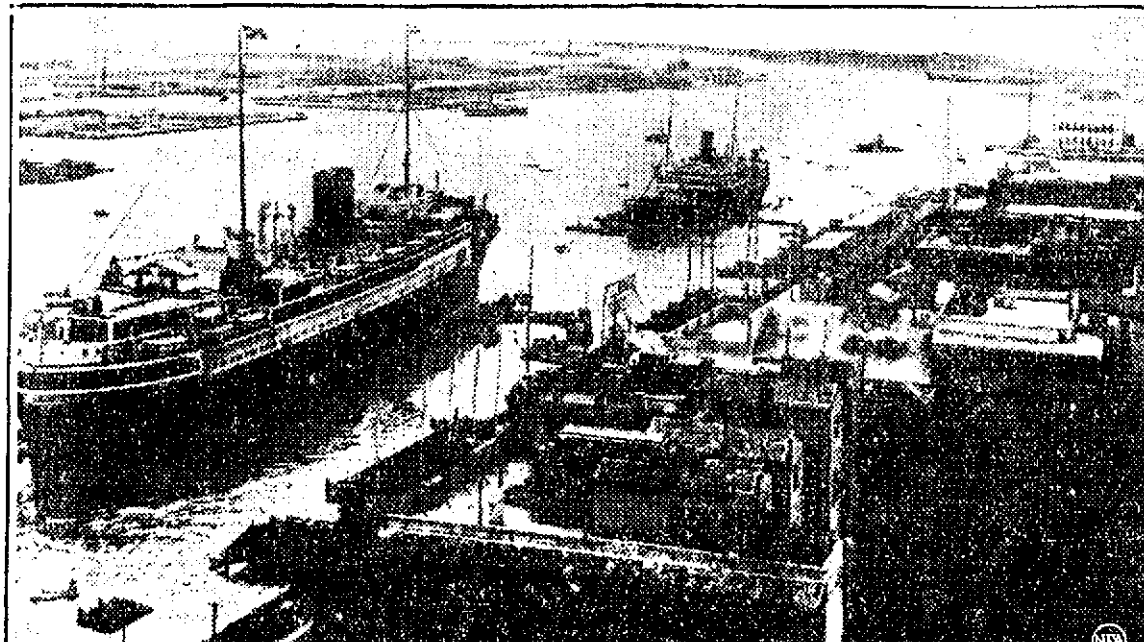

While Ethiopia's defenders straggle to the front in primitive fashion, Italian troops and officers advance on Africa in comparative comfort. Here 4500 jam the liner Saturnia as they sail from Naples.

Greyhounds of Britain's Navy Become Watch-Dogs of Suez

Grandson Shares Rogers' Millions

Crack war vessels of Britain's Mediterranean fleet, shown here in striking contrast to an ancient fortress in the harbor of Valletta, have ordered to proceed from Malta to points in and around the Suez Canal, through which Italian troop ships must pass on their way to the eastern frontier of Ethiopia.

Italy's Aquatic Pathway to Ethiopia—the Suez Canal—now is to be protected by a ring of British warships as England threatens to become involved in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis. Here's the Port Said entrance to the all-important canal.

Peter Salm, (above), grandson of the late Col. H. H. Rogers, was made a very rich boy by the oil magnate's will which bequeathed to him a one-third interest in an estate worth many millions.

Spectator Fight Stirs Fair Park

But Sideshow Fails to Disturb Hollis in Mat Victory Over Williams

The Fair Park arena fight program was continued Thursday night when an unscheduled bout broke out in the south side section between Jett Williams, Jr., and Raymond Urban. Deputy Sheriff R. O. Robins was on the scene and quickly separated the combatants. If there was a decision it was not announced. Both are Hope youths.

Wrestling fans received more than their money's worth in the regular scheduled bouts. Ken Hollis won over Lefty Williams in the main event, witnessed by approximately 300 spectators.

Hollis, usually a tough meanie, resorted to clean tactics and won the episode of the crowd by taking two out of three falls. Hollis pinned Williams in 22 minutes for the first fall.

Williams took the second in 13 minutes with a back bend. In the final round Williams dealt out much misery to Hollis before the former "Red Scorpion" became tired and took to slugging stuff. With Williams apparently dizzy from a series of falls to the mat, Hollis then pinned him.

"Cyclone" Herb Sampson and "Count" von Bromberg put on a good show in the preliminary. Sampson took the first fall in 18 minutes. The second fall also went to Sampson in 12 minutes.

Promoter Donald Moore said Friday that he would attempt to bring two heavyweight grapplers here next week. All previous bouts have been between light heavyweights.

The greatest default of religion in all times has been that while it generally seeks to cultivate a hatred of sin, it has rarely succeeded in separating hatred of sin from hatred of the sinner—Tyler Dennett, president, Williams college.

Happiness can come from only one thing, peace of mind. And that comes from an equal opportunity to serve, to learn, and to acquire property.—Ex-Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

Either we preserve the United States as it was bequeathed to us and as we have known it or we depart for fantastic adventures on an unknown sea of guesswork.—Col. William J. Donovan of New York.

I love my wife! I can't go through with this—Virgil F. Winslow, Los Angeles, in court where he was suing for divorce the wife to whom he had been married 35 years.

Those words "freedom" and "opportunity" do not mean a license to climb upward by pushing other people down.—President Roosevelt.

Sister MARY'S KITCHEN

Rich With Sauce Is Likely to Be Richer Than Potatoes

By MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

For years potatoes were misunderstood. Everybody, including scientists, talked about the calories they added and blamed them for making people fat, forgetting all about their valuable minerals.

The minerals are why it's not so easy to find satisfactory potato substitutes. Remember, too, that the tendency to serve macaroni or noodles in a rich sauce leads to the addition of many more calories than simply cooked potatoes.

When the meat course is light a good dish of macaroni, spaghetti, rice or noodles will help the meal. Noodle ring with its eggs and milk adds many protein calories. Macaroni in a tomato and cheese sauce does its share in the same direction.

Plain Rice With Hearty Meat Flattened rice is suitable to serve with a hearty meat meal. You know that unless rice is cooked in milk or richly dressed with butter, three-fourths of a cup is only a hundred calories.

Potatoes are traditional with macaroni and spaghetti, but the combination of macaroni and onions is unusual and delicious. Boil, too. Parboil the macaroni as usual. Then arrange sliced onions layer for layer with the macaroni for spaghetti in a well-buttered baking dish. A thin white sauce is poured over to cover the mixture and the dish is baked forty-five minutes in a moderate oven.

Noodle ring is good filled with any creamed fish, meat or full-flavored vegetable. Creamed sweetbreads and mushrooms, maybe, for party luncheon. Or filled with creamed cauliflower or creamed onions, this makes an excellent family luncheon, served with, say, an egg salad.

Needle Ring

Two cups noodles, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 1/2 cup grated cheese, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon white pepper, 1-8 teaspoon dry mustard, 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Cook noodles in boiling salted water for ten minutes. Drain. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt, pepper, mustard and Worcestershire sauce. Add cheese and cook until melted. Remove from fire and add noodles and well beaten yolks of eggs. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff. Turn into a well buttered mold and bake forty-five minutes in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.). Unmold and serve with any preferred creamed mixture. Be sure to grease the mold thoroughly. Otherwise you'll have trouble removing baked mixture. Run spatula around both edges of mold and invert on a hot platter or chop-plate, depending on shape of mold.
